Hello Oregon FFA!

“Why fit in, when you are born to stand out?” Dr. Seuss taught most of us this when we were young children but the real question is how long does it take for us to learn this wonderful message. For me it took four years to really understand and learn what the great writer was saying. I owe my outgoing personality to the FFA and the wonderful people that go along with it. FFA has brought many new experiences into my life from state conventions to leadership camps to national convention and even simple contests. Learning to stand out is what life is really all about.

FFA is an organization that help brings opportunity to the lives of young adults. In my past four years I have learned so much. I’ve learned that I love public speaking and that I will never be good at FBM. I have made friends from all around the state of Oregon and learned how to be professional with businesses and other organizations.

My desire to be a part of the FFA was greatly influenced by my older siblings, and once I entered high school the influence of advisors, state officers, and other members that desire only began to burn brighter. That spark still carries on, as I embark on this journey to run for an Oregon FFA State Office. The experience that I will have received at the end of this wonderful journey will be one that I will remember many years to come.

As I begin to look upon my future I start to think that I will be leaving the FFA behind in a few years although I will always be a large supporter of this magnificent organization. FFA has influenced my life so profoundly I would give so much to make a tiny impact on it. I hope I can accomplish this by serving as one of your 2015-2016 State officers. As a state officer I hope to help young adults learn that they were born to stand out.

See you at State Convention!

Sincerely,

Janna Bunker
